PREFACE

The first edition of this checklist was published by the National Library of Canada in March 1980 at the request of the Committee on Library and Information Needs of Native Peoples of the Canadian Library Association. That edition included 295 titles in 44 languages. The revised and enlarged edition comprises more than 500 titles in 58 languages or dialects. It includes only pre-1950 imprints: books in native languages as well as dictionaries and grammars for studying and learning native languages held in the collection of the Rare Book Division and in the Printed Collection of the Music Division are listed. Each work included is complete in itself; word lists, vocabularies and brief translations found in larger works are not listed.

Entries are arranged alphabetically by language and chronologically within each language group. Full title-page information is given for each item, with book titles expressed in boldface. However, since this is a checklist and not a formal bibliography, the entries are presented in standard library style; the use of capital letters is limited and punctuation has been provided where needed. Pagination is included in the entry, and the height of the leaf is given in centimetres. No attempt has been made to reproduce syllabic characters, Micmac hieroglyphics, etc. Omissions are indicated by ellipses. Supplied titles, in the language of the translator, are provided where title-pages are expressed in exotic symbols. Square brackets identify supplied information. Square brackets used by the printer have been enclosed in round brackets to show that information has

PRÉFACE

Une première édition de ce répertoire a été publiée par la Bibliothèque nationale du Canada en mars 1980 à la demande du Committee on Library and Information Needs of Native Peoples de la Canadian Library Association. Elle comportait 295 ouvrages en 44 langues. L'édition revue et augmentée compte plus de 500 ouvrages dans 58 langues ou dialectes; elle se limite aux publications antérieures à 1950, soit des ouvrages en langues autochtones ainsi que des dictionnaires et des grammaires destinés à l'étude des langues autochtones. Ces imprimés font partie des collections de la Division des livres rares et de la collection d'imprimés de la Division de la musique. Chaque ouvrage cité forme un tout; les vocabulaires, glossaires et courtes traductions extraites d'un ouvrage ont été omis.

Les notices sont classées par ordre alphabétique selon les langues et par ordre chronologique à l'intérieur de chaque langue. La page de titre est reproduite intégralement avec le titre de l'ouvrage en caractères gras. Toutefois, puisqu'il s'agit d'un répertoire et non d'une bibliographie, la présentation des notices se conforme aux normes courantes en usage dans les bibliothèques; l'utilisation des majuscules est réduite et la ponctuation a été ajoutée lorsque c'était nécessaire. La pagination est donnée pour chaque notice ainsi que les dimensions en centimètres. Nous n'avons pas essayé de reproduire les caractères syllabiques, les hiéroglyphes micmac, etc. Les omissions sont signalées par des points de suspension. Lorsque la page de titre est imprimée en caractères exotiques, c'est son équivalent dans la langue du traducteur qui a été choisi. Des crochets identifient les renseignements fournis par l'auteur de la compilation. Ceux qui figurent not been supplied. Notes are in French and English, with the language of the translator used first. Notes on translators whose first language is neither French nor English are expressed in English first. References to major bibliographies are included, and relevant information has been quoted from them in many cases.

Locations have been omitted from this edition of the checklist. All of the books listed may be consulted at the National Library of Canada; none is available for interlibrary loan. However, many of the titles included are held in other Canadian collections. Many are listed in DOBIS, and the Location Division of the National Library of Canada would be pleased to give information as to where copies not listed in DOBIS can be found.

Those who have used the previous edition of this checklist will note that some of the language groupings have been reorganized. For example, all books in Eskimo languages have been gathered together under the heading Eskimo, which is subdivided by languages or dialects, e.g., Eskimo-Baffin, Eskimo-Greenlandic, etc. All items in Ojibway, Chippewa and Saulteaux are gathered together under the heading Ojibway. There are many "see" references.

The compiler would like to acknowledge the assistance of Mr. Roy Wright, linguist "extraordinaire", in identifying native languages used in the publications listed, and his assistance in sorting out the relationships among them. The encouragement and help of colleagues in the Rare Book Division, the Literary Manuscripts Collection and the Music Division of the National Library of Canada are also gratefully acknowledged.

dans l'ouvrage même ont été placés entre parenthèses pour indiquer que l'information n'a pas été fournie. Les notes sont rédigées en français et en anglais, avec priorité à la langue du traducteur. Les notes sur les traducteurs dont la langue première n'est ni le français ni l'anglais sont rédigées en anglais d'abord. Les bibliographies importantes sont signalées; dans de nombreux cas, elles nous ont livré des renseignements utiles.

Cette édition du répertoire ne localise pas les ouvrages cités. Ils peuvent être consultés à la Bibliothèque nationale du Canada, mais ne sont pas disponibles par l'entremise du prêt entre bibliothèques. Notons toutefois qu'un grand nombre d'ouvrages cités se trouve dans d'autres collections canadiennes. Une bonne partie a été répertoriée dans le DOBIS, et la Division de la localisation de la Bibliothèque nationale donnera volontiers tout renseignement sur la localisation des ouvrages absents du DOBIS.

Les lecteurs qui connaissent l'édition précédente de ce répertoire remarqueront que certains classements linguistiques ont été remaniés. Par exemple, tous les ouvrages en langue esquimaude ont été regroupés sous la rubrique Eskimo, elle-même subdivisée en langues ou dialectes (Eskimo-Baffin, Eskimo-groënlandais, etc.). Tous les ouvrages en ojibway, chippewa et saulteux sont groupés dans la section Ojibway. La liste comporte en outre de nombreux renvois.

L'auteur voudrait remercier Roy Wright, linguiste émérite dont l'aide a permis d'identifier les langues autochtones des publications citées et d'établir leurs parentés. Les remerciements s'adressent également à ses collègues de la Division des livres rares de la Collection des manuscrits littéraires et de la Division de la musique de la Bibliothèque nationale du Canada, dont les encouragements et l'appui ont été vivement appréciés.

INTRODUCTION

The nature of native language literature to the mid-20th century was mainly evangelical. Until then, with few exceptions books for the use of the native peoples of Canada were written or translated by missionaries and printed or published by religious orders or societies. Most are Bible translations or devotional works; some include music. Some were also printed to encourage support for missions. This was almost certainly the case with two of the earliest items, originally printed at Rouen for the Jesuits in 1630, which were reprinted as an appendix to Les voyages de la Novvelle France occidentale, dicte Canada, faits par le Sr de Champlain (1632): "L'oraison Dominicale, tradvite en langage des Montagnards de Canada, par le R.P. Massé de la Compagnie de Iesus" and "Doctrine Chrestienne, dv R.P. Ledesme de la Compagnie de Iesus. Traduicte en langage Canadois, autre que celuy des Montagnars, pour la Conuersion des habitans dudit pays. Par le R.P. Breboeuf de la mesme Compagnie." The earliest known printed score for a native song doubtless falls into this category as well: "Petit eschantillon d'une chanson Huronne," which appeared in Histoire dv Canada et voyages qve les Freres Mineurs Recollects y ont faicts pour la conuersion des Infidelles (1636), by Gabriel Sagard.

Early interest in recording native Canadian languages was evident on two levels, vocabularies and dictionaries. Of these, the second was to be of more importance in the mastery of spoken native languages and, by extension, the preparation of books in native languages. There have been

Jusqu'au milieu du XX$^{e}$ siècle, les publications en langues autochtones avaient une vocation essentiellement évangélique. À de rares exceptions près, les ouvrages destinés aux peuples indigènes du Canada sont écrits ou traduits par des missionnaires et imprimés ou publiés soit par des sociétés soit par des ordres religieux. La plupart sont des traductions de la Bible et des livres pieux; certains s'ornent de partitions musicales. Parfois, la publication vise à encourager l'aide aux missions. C'est sans doute le cas de deux volumes les plus anciens, imprimés à Rouen en 1630 pour les Jésuites, puis réédités sous forme d'annexes à Les Voyages de la Novvelle France occidentale, dicte Canada, faits par le Sr de Champlain (1632): "L'oraison Dominicale tradvite en langage des Montagnards de Canada, par le R.P. Massé de la Compagnie de Iesus" et "Doctrine Chrestienne, dv R.P. Ledesme de la Compagnie de Iesus. Traduicte en langage Canadois, autre que celuy des Montagnars, pour la Conuersion des habitans dudit pays. Par le R.P. Breboeuf de la mesme Compagnie". La première partition connue de chant autochtone appartient à n'en pas douter à cette même catégorie: "Petit eschantillon d'une chanson Huronne", parue dans Histoire dv Canada et voyages qve les Freres Mineurs Recollects y ont faicts pour la conuersion des Infidelles (1636) de Gabriel Sagard.

Les premiers efforts de transcription des langues autochtones ont pris deux formes: vocabulaires et dictionnaires. Ce sont les dictionnaires qui se sont avérés les plus utiles pour l'apprentissage des parlers aborigènes et, partant, pour la rédaction des ouvrages en langues autochtones. On trouve assez souvent des vocabulaires et des glossaires dans les comptes many examples of vocabularies and word lists included in the printed accounts of voyages and travels, beginning with two for the Huron language which appeared in Jacques Cartier's Brief recit, & succincte narration, de la nauigation faicte es ysles de Canada, Hochelage & Saguenay & autres, auec particulieres meurs, langaiage, & cerimonies des habitans d'icelles: fort delectable à veoir (1545). These provided an element of North American exotica for contemporary European readers, and have continued to be of scholarly interest to linguists. Of greater significance for the purpose of learning and translating are the printed dictionaries, prepared for the use of those who would travel or live among the native peoples, or who would study their languages. The earliest of these was Dictionaire de la langve Hvronne, necessaire à ceux qui n'ont l'intelligence d'icelle, & ont à traiter auec les sauuages du pays (1632), by Sagard, issued with his work, Le grand voyage dv pays des Hvrons, situé en l'Amérique (1632). In this sphere as well, evidence of the commercial interest of the fur trade is also apparent. A dictionary of the Hudson's-Bay language, that is Cree, the trade language of Rupert's Land, was printed in London at the expense of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1701. This elusive imprint, which has been a source of fascination to Canadian bibliographers was the subject of a fine scholarly paper by H. Christoph Wolfart read before the Bibliographical Society of Canada in Winnipeg in 1983.

The first native language books printed in North America (excluding Mexico) were those translated by John Eliot, a Puritan missionary in colonial America, beginning in 1654 with a primer or catechism printed at rendus de voyages et d'explorations, à commencer par les deux annexes sur le huron du Brief recit, & succincte narration, de la nauigation faicte es ysles de Canada, Hochelage & Saguenay & autres, auec particulieres meurs, langaiage & cerimonies des habitans d'icelles: fort delectable à veoir (1545) de Jacques Cartier, qui apportèrent aux lecteurs européens de l'époque un peu d'exotisme nord-américain et continuent à intéresser les linguistes. Les dictionnaires - compilés à l'intention des Européens qui comptaient voyager ou vivre parmi les autochtones, ou encore qui souhaitaient communiquer directement avec eux - jouèrent un rôle autrement plus important dans l'apprentissage et la traduction des langues indigènes. Le premier en date, le Dictionaire de la langve Hvronne, necessaire à ceux qui n'ont l'intelligence d'icelle, & ont à traiter auec les sauuages du pays (1632) de Sagard, fut publié avec le livre du même auteur, Le grand voyage dv pays des Hvrons, situé en l'Amérique (1632). Certains titres témoignent de l'intérêt manifesté par les milieux de traite. En 1701, A Dictionary of the Hudson's-Bay language, c'est-à-dire le cri, langue de traite de la terre de Rupert, fut publié à Londres aux frais de la Compagnie de la Baie d'Hudson. Ce mystérieux imprimé, qui continue à passionner les bibliographes canadiens, a fait en 1983 l'objet d'une excellente communication de H. Christoph Wolfart devant la Société bibliographique du Canada lors de la réunion de Winnipeg.

Les premiers ouvrages en langues autochtones imprimés en Amérique du Nord (à l'exclusion du Mexique) sont des traductions faites par John Eliot, missionnaire puritain de l'Amérique coloniale. La série est inaugurée en 1654 par un catéchisme publié à Cambridge. Viennent ensuite quelques traductions des Écritures, et, en 1663, ce qu'il est convenu d'appeler la Cambridge. Some scriptural translations followed, and in 1663 the so-called Eliot Bible was published, "the earliest example in history of the translation and printing of the entire Bible in a new language as a means of evangelization" (Darlow & Moule, 6737). A slow but steady flow of native language books from American presses followed.

In Canada, the earliest books for Indian converts were printed at Quebec soon after the introduction of printing there. Prepared by Jean Baptiste de La Brosse, S.J., they include an alphabet and a primer and prayer book, Nehiro-iriniui aiamihe massinahigan (1767), in the Montagnais language. The next recorded Canadian imprint, the first native language book to be printed at Montreal, was a Mohawk primer with Roman Catholic prayers, Iontri8aiestak8a ionskaneks n'aieienterihag gaiatonsera te gari8toraragon ong8e on8e ga8ennontakon (1777). This was followed by a bilingual edition of the Church of England Book of Common Prayer (1780) in Mohawk and English. Printed at Quebec for Daniel Claus, Deputy Superintendant of Indians in Canada (1760-1787) and paid for by Governor's warrant at the expense of His Majesty's Forces (Tremaine, 335), this would appear to be an early example of government support for native language books, as well as evidence of concern for the needs of Loyalist Indians faithful to the state church. It might more accurately be described as the Anglican response to Roman Catholic books, the first instance in their rivalry over the printing of books for the use of native converts in Canada, which was to be of particular significance in stimulating native language publishing both in Canada and abroad during the 19th century. A second book was printed for Claus at Montreal, A primer for the use of Mohawk children (1781). These two titles were also published in London by the Society for Bible Eliot, "the earliest example in history of the translation and printing of the entire Bible in a new language as a means of evangelization" (Darlow & Moule, 6737). Les ouvrages en langues autochtones continueront à sortir des presses américaines à un rythme lent mais régulier.

Au Canada, les premiers livres destinés aux Amérindiens convertis furent publiés à Québec sous la direction du père jésuite Jean-Baptiste de la Brosse, et cela peu après l'apparition de l'imprimerie dans la région; on y trouve un abécédaire et un missel-catéchisme, Nehiro-iriniui aiamihe massinahigan (1767) en montagnais. L'ouvrage suivant, le premier en langue autochtone à sortir d'une imprimerie montréalaise, est un missel catholique en mohawk, Iontri8aiestak8a ionskaneks n'aieienterihag gaiatonsera te gari8toraragon ong8e ong8e ga8ennontakon (1777). Vient ensuite une édition bilingue (mohawk - anglais) du livre de prières de l'église anglicane (1780) imprimée à Québec pour Daniel Claus, surintendant adjoint des Indiens du Canada (1760-1787) et, sur autorisation du Gouverneur, aux frais des Armées de Sa Majesté (Trémaine, 335). On pourrait y voir un exemple précoce d'aide gouvernementale aux publications en langues autochtones, ainsi qu'une attention spéciale portée aux besoins des Indiens loyalistes fidèles à la religion officielle. Mais il s'agit plus probablement d'une réplique anglicane aux publications catholiques et du premier épisode de la guerre des livres pour autochtones convertis qui devait opposer les deux églises et contribuer largement à l'essor des publications en langues indigènes au Canada et à l'étranger au XIX$^{e}$ siècle. Claus commanda un second livre à Montréal, A Primer for the use of Mohawk children (1781). Ces deux titres furent en outre publiés à Londres par la Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in 1787 and 1786 respectively. The imprints mentioned here are all landmark books; they also represent nearly the entire catalogue of native language materials printed for use in Canada during the 18th century.

While early native language printing produced books of seminal importance, the total product of the 17th and 18th centuries gave no intimation of the volume of material which was to appear during the 19th century, when the Anglicans and Roman Catholics were joined in their translational labours by the Moravians, Wesleyans and Methodists. Thousands of books were printed for the use of the native peoples in Canada. The growing canon of titles attracted the interest of collectors, linguists and bibliographers. The great bibliographer of native language literature was James Constantine Pilling, whose work was published between 1885 and 1894. None of the bibliographies or lists of materials in or upon native languages published before or since approach Pilling's work in size or range. However, there are several outstanding 20th century bibliographies, noted here in Bibliographies Cited, which include items of importance to native language literature research. A growing number of special works devoted solely to native language literature are now appearing. Among those most appropriate to mention here is A bibliography of Inuit (Eskimo) linguistics in collections of the Metropolitan Toronto Library, compiled by Barry Edwards in collaboration with Mary Love (Toronto: Metropolitan Toronto Library Board [1982]). This item also appears among the bibliographies cited for this checklist. Last year a work focusing on the use of syllabic characters appeared, A bibliography of Algonquian syllabic texts in Canadian repositories, by John Murdoch en 1787 et 1786 respectivement. Les ouvrages cités sont autant d'événements historiques; ils représentent de surcroît la totalité des matériaux en langues autochtones publiés pour les usagers canadiens du XVIII$^{e}$ siècle.

Les premiers efforts de publications en langues autochtones nous ont légué des ouvrages qui font date; le volume total de la production des XVII$^{e}$ et XVIII$^{e}$ siècles ne laissait cependant en rien présager le déferlement d'imprimés qui devait survenir au XIX$^{e}$ siècle lorsque moraves, wesleyiens et méthodistes s'avisèrent, à l'instar des catholiques et des protestants, de se lancer dans la traduction. Des milliers d'ouvrages destinés aux populations autochtones du Canada sortirent des presses. Le nombre croissant d'ouvrages suscita l'intérêt des bibliophiles, des linguistes et aussi des bibliographes parmi lesquels James Constantine Pilling, éminent spécialiste des ouvrages en langues autochtones dont les travaux parurent entre 1885 et 1894. Aucune bibliographie ou liste documentaire publiée avant ou après ces dates ne peut rivaliser avec l'envergure et le volume des travaux de Pilling. Le XX$^{e}$ siècle produira toutefois plusieurs bibliographies remarquables, mentionnées dans la section Bibliographies citées, importantes pour ceux qui s'intéressent à la recherche sur les publications en langues autochtones. Les ouvrages spéciaux consacrés exclusivement aux oeuvres rédigées dans telle ou telle langue autochtone deviennent de plus en plus courants. Nous citerons en particulier A bibliography of Inuit (Eskimo) linguistics in collections of the Metropolitan Toronto Library compilé par Barry Edwards en collaboration avec Mary Love (Toronto: Metropolitan Toronto Library Board [1982]), ouvrage qui figure également parmi les bibliographies du présent répertoire. L'année dernière, John Murdoch a publié une étude sur l'utilisation (Rupert House: Project ASTIC, 1984). Covering the period from the 1840s, when the first books in syllabic characters were printed, to the 1980s, this bibliography demonstrates the continuing importance of the syllabic system in native language books; it is not simply a curiosity of the 19th century missionary movement, but is a part of the living heritage of the Canadian native peoples. Mr. Murdoch will continue to produce bibliographies in this field, and is currently preparing a work on Inuit books in syllabic characters.

An important scholarly work which appeared recently is Masinahikan: native language imprints in the archives and libraries of the Anglican Church of Canada, compiled by Karen Evans (Toronto: Anglican Book Centre, 1985). It includes a full, formal bibliographical description of each title listed. Such a large-scale project has not previously been undertaken for native language books. The bibliography includes 746 entries, and provides access to rich but somewhat scattered holdings in archives and libraries in several Canadian cities. A second outstanding scholarly bibliography of interest to all working in the field of native language literature is Bibliography of Algonquian linguistics, by David H. Pentland and H. Christoph Wolfart (Winnipeg: The University of Manitoba Press, 1982). Though prepared as a supplement to Bibliography of Algonquian languages (1891), by Pilling, it is limited to pedagogical materials in the field of linguistics; native lanugage books have been omitted. In the broader field of native studies, two federal government publications of considerable value must also be included here. Resources for native peoples studies, by Nora T. Corley (Ottawa: National Library of Canada, 1984), includes a general description of native studies collecdes caractères syllabiques, A bibliography of Algonquian syllabic texts in Canadian repositories (Rupert House: Project ASTIC, 1984). Cette bibliographie, qui s'étend des années 1840, date de publication des premiers livres en caractères syllabiques, aux années 1980, souligne la place que garde dans les ouvrages en langues autochtones le système syllabique et démontre que, loin d'être une simple relique pittoresque du mouvement d'évangélisation du XIX$^{e}$ siècle, il appartient à l'héritage vivant des peuples aborigènes du Canada. John Murdoch a l'intention de poursuivre ses travaux dans ce domaine; il prépare actuellement un ouvrage sur les livres inuit en caractères syllabiques.

Karen Evans vient de publier une importante étude, intitulée Masinahikan: native language imprints in the archives and libraries of the Anglican Church of Canada. Cette étude comporte une description bibliographique complète et systématique de chaque ouvrage cité. Il s'agit là du premier projet d'envergure portant sur les livres en langues autochtones. La bibliographie compte 746 entrées; elle décrit un fonds très riche quoiqu'éparpillé dans les archives et les bibliothèques de plusieurs villes canadiennes. Quiconque s'intéresse au domaine des publications en langues autochtones consultera en outre avec profit la remarquable Bibliography of Algonquian Linguistics de David H. Pentland et H. Christoph Wolfart (Winnipeg: the University of Manitoba Press, 1982). Bien que conçu comme supplément à la Bibliography of Algonquian languages de Pilling (1891), l'ouvrage ne signale que les ouvrages de pédagogie linguistique; les livres rédigés en langues autochtones ont été tions in 318 Canadian libraries, as well as extensive lists of periodicals by and about native peoples and reference works useful for native studies. Indian history and claims: a research handbook, prepared by Bennett Ellen McCardle (Ottawa: Indian and Northern Affairs, 1982) complements the other titles mentioned here. Also in preparation by the same author is "Archival records relating to native people in the Public Archives of Canada, the National Library of Canada and the National Museum of Man," to be published by the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs.

Native language literature has a long history, but native language bibliography since Pilling has failed to keep abreast of activities in a rich and rewarding field. This checklist has been prepared as a modest contribution to the work now being undertaken by scholars, bibliographers, linguists and historians.

omis. Retenons aussi dans le domaine plus global des études autochtones Ressources sur les études autochtones de Nora T. Corley (Ottawa: Bibliothèque nationale du Canada, 1984), qui comprend une description générale des collections dans ce domaine de 318 bibliothèques canadiennes et des listes exhaustives de périodiques publiés par des autochtones ou qui leur sont consacrés, ainsi que des ouvrages de référence utiles aux spécialistes. Histoire et revendications des Indiens: Guide de recherche de Bennett Ellen McCardle (Ottawa: Affaires indiennes et du Nord Canada, 1984) peut s'ajouter aux ouvrages cités plus haut. Enfin, McCardle prépare une étude intitulée "Archival records relating to native people in the Public Archives of Canada, the National Library of Canada and the National Museum of Man," qui doit être publiée par le ministère des Affaires indiennes et du Nord Canada.

Les publications en langues autochtones ont une longue histoire, mais les travaux bibliographiques ont toujours accusé un certain retard depuis Pilling. Le présent répertoire se veut une modeste contribution aux travaux actuels des chercheurs, bibliographiques, linguistes et historiens.

1 The divinity, humanity, and office of Jefus Chryft. 15 The teftimony of John. 35 The calling of Andrew, Peter, &c.

IN the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

2 The fame was in the beginning with God.

3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.

4 In him was life: and the life was the light of men.

5 And the light fhineth in darknefs; and the darknefs comprehended it not.

6 There was a man fent from God, whofe name was John:

7 The fame came for a witnefs, to bear witnefs of the Light, that all men through him might believe.
